For my final project, I'd include platforms where my character has to avoid any obstacles (fire and triangles) in her way to get to the other door. When she gets there, she will go to another dimension where she will do the same thing. I will have my own graphic designs, though they will be random since I want to make the game seem unusual each level.