

Edward: First generation Puerto-Rican immigrant who moved to America with his wife, and two daughters.

Living in constant fear of rioters, but also facing poverty, Edward must balance out protection of his family, while also keeping his business alive.

Runs pharmacy/corner store in New York, Edward is a tall, heavy weighted man. His wife and daughters help him run the store: helping customers, cleaning, etc.

Edit: Edward Rivera, the Rivera family

Game name: Don't Go Broke

Play as a small business owner and protect your family and livelihood from rioters

^ I like this one

Multiple choices that change what may happen to your business and family. Buy food, buy medicine, buy store products, buy protection. different choices, different outcomes.

The goal would be to get enough money to keep your family happy and successful. Maybe even achieve an upgrade for your store as a win.

(Very rough sketch...)

Money goals to upgrade the business

Getting kids college tuition paid

Paying off your debts

Win against lawsuits
