

I would like to create a game resembling an escape room in which there are different puzzles the player has to accomplish before escaping. Completion of each puzzle will grant the player a fragment of a key, and when all fragments are collected, the player will be allowed to leave. The game may also incorporate some light horror elements, and ideally, it would be made in three dimensions.

